Intense urban usage is usually premature and undesirable, due to lack of infrastructure. Uses that might have nuisance characteristics, if intermingled in developed residential areas, are permitted on the basis that they are no more offensive than normal agricultural uses.

General agricultural operations -- Nothing in this Article shall apply to or affect any land which is outside the corporate city limits, but subject to these regulations, when such land is in excess of ten (10) acres under one ownership and actually used for agricultural purposes. Any land within the corporate city limits actually used for agricultural purposes shall be subject to these regulations, and if located within the A district, shall be subject to this Article.
